Stewardship Corner

In a sermon on faithful use of money, John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist Church, urged Christians to "earn all you can" (by using our abilities in honest work), "save all you can" (by not frittering our money away on shiny objects we really don't need), and "give all you can" (so that giving is central to our financial management and not an afterthought). Almost 300 years later, that is still solid Christian advice for being good financial stewards.
